Rayonier opens properties in Skamania County, WA

POULSBO, Washington – Due to improved weather conditions and lower industrial fire precaution levels (IFPL) observed, Rayonier has decided to open access to:

- General public, in Skamania County, Washington. Limited only to historic Pope Resources and ORM Timber Funds forestlands, where public access has historically been permitted.

The table below shows the current access policies for properties located in California, Oregon and Washington.

	California	Oregon	Washington
Logging and other contractors	open	open	open
Employees	open ¹	open ¹	open ¹
Hunting & Rec customers: license and permit holders		walk-in only access in all counties with restrictions ²	open access in all counties with restrictions ³
General public	closed	closed	only to historic Pope Resources and ORM Timber Funds lands ³

¹ Subject to internal coordination with managers, especially in areas directly impacted by the fires

² Absolutely no campfires, no target shooting, and no smoking

³ Absolutely no campfires, no vehicle travel on overgrown roads, no off-road use of motorized vehicles, no target shooting, no littering, no firewood cutting, and no smoking

We continue to monitor weather conditions on a regular basis and may determine to open or close forestland properties on an area-by-area basis. In the event that IFPL requirements become more restrictive, everyone entering Rayonier or its subsidiaries' forestlands is expected to follow the more restrictive requirements.

Our support and hearts go out to all the emergency responders, local government, and volunteers on the frontlines fighting the existing fires, preventing new ones and keeping everyone safe.
