

Value From The Ground Up™

At Rayonier, we evaluate every acre of our timberlands to ensure each reaches its highest and best use. Some of our lands that had a previous highest and best use of growing timber are now in the path of residential, industrial and commercial growth making it more valuable for other uses.

One example is our large land holdings in the high-value I-95 coastal corridor that position us to be successful in the region long term. And some of our lands are now best suited for conservation or rural recreation uses.

At Rayonier, we pay close attention to the changes in the value of our lands and their surroundings. The continuous evaluation of our lands helps us determine the best possible use for each acre.

When lands are environmentally, geologically or historically significant, we may sell them to conservation groups to conserve them for future generations. In other instances, lands that were once remote forests are now surrounded by economic growth and development, which generates new opportunities to create value for the company.

Our real estate subsidiary, TerraPointe LLC, executes our value creation strategy by entitling properties for residential, commercial and industrial uses, master planning and permitting for future communities, and marketing of higher and better use properties.

Frequently Asked Questions

Q: I'd like to inquire about Rayonier property. What is the process?
