FSCJ and Rayonier, Inc. Offer New Scholarship Opportunities for Nassau County Residents

WILDLIGHT, Fla. – Florida State College at Jacksonville (FSCJ) and Rayonier, Inc. announce the addition of a new endowed scholarship for Nassau County residents pursuing specific certificate programs, along with the expansion of the current Rayonier Community Fund Scholarship that benefits Nassau County residents pursuing a degree on a full- or part-time basis.

The new Rayonier Workforce and Technical Certificate Endowed Scholarship, funded through a $25,000 donation, will provide financial assistance to qualified Nassau County residents enrolled in the following technical or workforce certificates:

- Fire Officer Supervisor Technical Certificate
- Geographic Information System (GIS) Technician Technical Certificate
- Commercial Vehicle Driving Workforce Certificate
- Firefighter I/II Workforce Certificate
- Welding Technology Workforce Certificate

“We are very thankful to Rayonier for their continued partnership in helping provide opportunities for our students,” said FSCJ Interim President Kevin Hyde. “This new workforce and technical certificate scholarship will help Nassau County students quickly prepare for in-demand career opportunities currently available with local employers.”

In addition, the current Rayonier Community Fund Scholarship, established in 2015, will expand to provide financial assistance to qualified Nassau County residents enrolled for a minimum of six credit hours, entering FSCJ with a 2.5 high school GPA or maintaining a 2.5 GPA at FSCJ.

“Rayonier is excited to continue and expand our relationship with FSCJ and our commitment to Nassau County students,” said Rayonier President and CEO David L. Nunes. “The FSCJ – Nassau Campus is an asset to our community to help Nassau County students make their education and career dreams a reality.”

For both scholarships, preference will be given to students that graduated from a Nassau County high school or obtained their GED within the previous five years.
